TOP MENU PICKS

Mild winter weather lent its way to early spring crops this year. Asparagus, Artichokes, Fava Beans, Green Garlic, Radishes, Shelling Peas, and Spring Onions are at their peak this season. Peas are expected to end in late May. Our forager partners find Fiddlehead Ferns, Stinging Nettles, and Ramps that grow wild. The best mushrooms of the season are Chanterelles and Morels. For fruit, Strawberries are a peak spring item, and all berries will be available throughout the season and year round. Local Apricots will begin to appear in mid-April and Cherries will appear in late May, as spring is the kick off to summer stone fruit season. California Avocados start up in March.

Season Disclaimer: Spring officially starts on March 20th. During this time, the market is often unstable with price fluctuations, supply gaps, and quality variances. Most of the variation is weather related due to frost, hail, rain, and wind, which can impact fragile buds, leaves, and shoots. Our experienced buyers are especially careful when picking product to bring in at this time of year. Longstanding relationships and timing are everything in procuring high quality product during spring.

SPRING SEASONAL ITEMS

APRICOTS

While apricots reach their peak in early summer, late spring in California sees the first of these golden fruits. Spring apricots are a treat, often smaller but intensely flavored, perfect for enjoying fresh or lightly grilled.

ARTICHOKES

Spring is prime artichoke season in California. From March through May, you'll find an abundance of these edible thistles, with the prized Castroville artichokes at their peak. Spring artichokes are particularly tender and flavorful, ideal for simple preparations that let their unique taste shine.

ASPARAGUS

Asparagus is the quintessential spring vegetable in California. The season kicks off in February and reaches its peak in April. Spring asparagus is notably tender and sweet, with thin, delicate spears that require minimal cooking. Pairs wonderfully with lemon, butter, or hollandaise sauce.

AVOCADOS

While available year-round, California avocados are at their best from spring through summer. The Hass variety, which dominates California production, starts to come into season in spring. Spring avocados tend to have a rich, creamy texture and nutty flavor, perfect for guacamole or avocado toast.

CHERRIES

Late spring marks the beginning of cherry season in California. Usually starting in May, the season is short but sweet. Early varieties like Brooks and Tulare cherries are the first to appear, offering a preview of the summer bounty to come. Spring cherries are often slightly tart but incredibly fresh and crisp.

GREEN GARLIC

Green garlic is a true spring delicacy in California, available from late winter through spring. This young, mild garlic is harvested before the bulbs fully mature and offers a subtle, fresh garlic flavor. Its brief season makes it a prized ingredient in spring dishes.

PEAS

Spring is the prime season for fresh peas in California. From March through May, you'll find sweet English peas, crisp sugar snap peas, and delicate snow peas at their peak. Spring peas are sweeter and more tender than at any other time of year, making them a true seasonal treat.

RADISHES

Spring radishes in California are notably crisp and flavorful. While available year-round, spring sees an abundance of varieties, from classic red globe radishes to watermelon radishes. Their peppery flavor is particularly vibrant in the cool spring months.

STRAWBERRIES

Strawberry season in California begins in spring, with the first berries appearing as early as February in some coastal areas. However, April to May is when strawberries reach their peak of flavor and abundance. Spring strawberries are often smaller but more intensely flavored than their summer counterparts, making them perfect for desserts or enjoying fresh.
